The phrase has become a classic, but even classics can succumb to time. Now, readers have another version to quote - the sentence found in a new translation of the novel: "Maman died today."

"L'Etranger" was first published by Galli-mard in Paris in 1942. The original English translation was by Stuart Gilbert, a respected British author and translator.

Although "The Stranger" was recognized as an important novel from the beginning, many American readers have wondered about its British usage.

In a review in The New York Times written in 1946, for example, Charles Poore wrote: "Mr. Gilbert's translation of the novel is at times rather Brittanic, Phrases such as 'good and proper' and sentences such as You've knocked around the world a bit, and I daresay you can help me,' sound closer to London than to Algiers."

How does he explain retaining mamon in an English translation instead of "mother"? "Well, I wouldn't use the word 'Mounny' because that belongs to our culture." Mr. Ward said. "'Mother' is a colder word. By using it, Gilbert changed something essential about the sensibility of Mersault, the central character, and his relationship with his relationship a psychological shift - the mother becomes distanced from the son. As a translator, I was not free to change their relationship.

Could he justify Americanizing French sentences?

"Camus admitted using an 'American method," particularly in the first half of the book," Mr. Ward said, "He mentioned Hemingway, Dos Passos, Faulkner and James M. Cain as influences. My feeling is that 'The Stranger' is more like Cain's 'The Postman Always Rings Twice' than Camus cared to admit.

Kidnapped Marine's Death Is Denied

BEIRUT (UPI) — A Christian-run radio station reported Monday that a kidnapped U.S. Marine officer, Lieutenant Colonel William R. Higgins, had been killed by his pro-Iranian captors, but an official of the pro-Syrian Shiite Amal militia denied the report. The Voice of Lebanon radio station, citing "special information," said that Colonel Higgins, 43, bad been killed by his kidnappers, members of the fundamentalist Hezbollah organization. It said the death occurred in the village of Siddigine, 47 miles (75 kilometers) south of Beirut, during fighting between the fuodameotalists and Amal earlier this month. Colonel Higgins was kidnapped Feb. 17.

The radio, which did not give a source for its report, said Colonel Higgins had been killed because his captors feared that Amal gunmen

On Jackson's Side, An Intense Loyalty Blacks in New York See Campaign

As a Source of Pride and Racism

By E.J. Dionne Jr. New York Times Service NEW YORK - To the distress of many black New Yorkers, the 1988 presidential primary has become a painful study in black and hite.

They see it as a campaign unged with racism, one in which the Rev-erend Jesse L. Jackson is neither forgiven any of his trespasses nor taken with the same seriousness accorded his white foes.

³ These views emerged from two discussions organized by The New York Times to determine black views of the campaign. For the meetings, both in New York City, church leaders and politicians gathered groups of Jackson supporters to explain their feelings before the primary election Tuesday, in which Democrats will pick 255 delegates for their national nominating convention. The blacks spoke of the white Democratic politicians who warn that concessions to Mr. Jackson, let alone a spot on the party's ticket for the fall campaign, could drive away a significant share of the

Their firm, even angry, response was: Don't mess with lesse Jack-

#However the Democratic Party handles this situation will reflect on how we handle the Democratic Party," said Darrell Gay, 33, a law-yer who was among 21 people interviewed in the two discussions. In this view, Mr. Jackson already has earned his way onto the Democratic ticket as a presidential or vice-presidential nominee. They say that refusing him would be a grave insult that could keep a sig-nificant share of black voters - the most loyal Democratic voters in the United States - away from the polls in November.

Or, for another example, take the words "Hymietown," which is how Mr. Jackson once referred to New York City, and "Farrakhan," a refcrence to Louis Farrakhan, leader if the Nation of Islam, who has called Judaism "a gutter religion" and who supports Mr. Jackson. While blacks know these words provoke anger among Jews, they see the continuing focus on them as symbolic of a racism that will not

Had not Mr. Jackson, they said, apologized for his "Hymietowa" remark and repudiated Mr. Farrakhan's views's N.

"What about all the names black people have been called?" asked Denise Peterson, 32, a municipal employee. "We got out and voted for some of the people who called us those names

Audrey Edwards, 39, an editor at Essence magazine, noted that anti-Semitism and the Holocaust were not the creations of blacks. "Jesse is the only one who has to be accountable for the sins of white people," she said.

Without question, Mr. Jackson is benefiting from an enthusiasm in the state's black community that cuts across every imaginable barrier of class, education, religion and ideology. If Mr. Jackson wins an upset in New York, this loyalty that one can touch and feel in the city's black neighborhoods will be its prime cause.

The cliché explanation for the outpouring of support for Mr. Jackson focuses on the intense pride blacks take in his achievement. And like many cliches, this one contains much truth. As often as not, the pride in Mr. Jackson is spoken of in the name of the bopes and dreams of black children; who are now free to imagine that they could become president of the United States.

"A 5-year-old can look at the TV screen and see a black man running for president and have it be credible. said Mr. Gay, "Jesse has inspired the belief that nothing in unconquerable."

But part of this black pride means insisting vehemently that Mr. Jackson's race should be utter-by irrelevant to the question at ly irrelevant to the question at hand. There is nothing more insulting to Mr. Jackson's supporters between the White House and Congress over trade legislation is endangering major international economic initiatives of the United States, including its free-trade pact with Canada, and could weaken the global posture of the nation, analysts have warned.

Following the collapse of a tentative compromise last week, representatives of President Ronald Reagan have clearly signaled that be will veto a trade bill that congressional Democrats said they expect to clear both houses by Friday.

The legislation contains a controversial provision that would require companies with more than 100 employees to notify their workers 60 days before they close plants or institute layoffs. The plan is supported by organized labor, but the White House has called it "injurious" to the economy, and businesses oppose it as an unwarranted intervention by the government into their affairs. Democratic leaders also were constituency out there that says preparing to incorporate into the you've got to have a trade bill." trade legislation another provision likely to be vetoed, requiring forcigners who own American real es-tate or 5 percent or more of a U.S. and chairman of the Finance Com-

"The trade bill will go down the tubes," said Senator Boh Dole of Kansas, the minority leader, urging the Democrats 10 make another atlempt to reach a compromise.

Clayton K. Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative, said, "We're back to ground zero after two or three years' work on a trade bill." Although some administration officials held out the possibility of a later compromise on a smaller bill if a veto is sustained, many legislative analysts remained skeptical, especially in an election year with a so-called Uruguay Round of trade liberalization negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and U.S. efforts to harmonize tariffs with most other nations. The authority to pursue these goals is contained in the trade bill. The Uruguay Round is a U.S. initiative to gain greater access in global markets for American agriculture and services such as banking and insurance. It would also change trade-distorting investment practices of many governments.

"There will be a sour taste in Congress that will make it more difficult for Canadian free trade," said Senator Max Baucus, Democrat of Montana and a member of the Finance Committee. The concern over Canada was echoed by Mr. Yeutter at a trade meeting in Vancouver, British Columbia, during the weekend, when he noted that "hruised feelings" of legislators, at the least, would defer consideration of the pact by Congress. He predicted a delay of 30 days, which would mean it would not come up until July 1, two weeks

For the pact to go into effect, Congress has to approve "imple-menting" legislation changing American regulations and laws to authorize the elimination of trade barriers against Canada. French Communists Facing a Debacle

By James M. Markham New York Times, Service

GENNEVILLIERS, France André Lajoinie did not sound like someone who was leading the French Communist Party into a debacle of historic dimensions. As 5,000 mostly working-class supporters roared on cue - whenever their presidential candidate raised his voice to a righteous shout -Mr. Lajoinic lambasted the French right and predicted that the Communists would emerge strengthened from the first round of voting next week.

Yet, unless all the opinion polls. are wildly askew. Mr. Lajoinie, a pleasant, square-faced Communist with a distinctive Midi twang, probably will draw 5 percent to 8 percent of the popular vote on Sunday. In the May 1981 presidential election, the Communists were severely embarrassed when their veteran leader, Georges Marchais, won only 15.3 percent. The party that once dominated

Even in its enfeebled state, the Communist Party will be able to influence the outcome of the May 8 runoff vote, which probably will pit Mr. Mitterrand against Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, the conservative leader. By repeatedly asserting that the Socialist president is no different from his rightist challeng-

With Mr. Chirac as president and the demoralized Socialisis in opposition, the Communists, it is argued, might be able to pose as the true champions of the left. Yet some Communists clearly will vote for the Socialist on May 8 no maiter what the party advises.

More and more plastic is being used in cars these days. But plastic rubbing against plastic gives the same squeaking sound that mice produce.

To solve this problem, silicone oil was added to the plastics. But that had an unfortunate side-effect. It meant that you couldn't achieve deep, bright colours. The oil came to the surface and caused a dull mat layer.

At DSM, one of Europe's largest chemical companies, we found the ideal solution. Our researchers developed a special plastic which met all the requirements.

It can be given any colour - exactly. It is impact-resistant, retains its colour, has an extremely long life, and can stand up to heat. Welding, painting, and gluing offer no problems. And that irritating squeak - for that's what it was all about - simply doesn't occur. So, although you will find more and more plastic in your car, you will now also find concession that Ethiopia's territorial integrity is at risk. Another is his new readiness to patch up feuds with Somalia and Sudan. An ominous third is his decision to expel all foreign relief workers - presumably so as to starve out the rebels without witnesses. These developments are sufficiently beyond the usual ebh and flow to raise the question of whether Colonel Mengistu's leadership is now under challenge — from within the military, the only available quarter.

The United States plays a tangled role in Ethiopia. It is deeply opposed to the Men-gistu regime's Soviet-bloc links, Marxist ideology and continuing cruelties. But although it is the major food donor to Ethiopia, it has shrunk from supporting the rebels politically on grounds that 1) the rebels, too, are Marxists and 2) Washington should hold to the traditional American (and African) reluc-tance to challenge the national borders

That leaves the United States, through successive administrations, committed to Ethiopian dominance in the Horn of Africa. It leaves the Reagan administration foca. It leaves the Reagan administration fo-cused now on trying to persuade Ethiopia's Soviet patrons to lighten the terrible loom-ing consequences of Ethiopian dominance — the death by starvation of huge numbers of Eritreans and Tigreans. Mikhail Gorbachev has begun looking at some other Third World places where the Kremlin is heavily involved. He could do much to spare Ethiopia more of the frightful death and suffering that the regime has meant for the people so far.

The Wise Were Wrong

Whoever wins in Afghanistan after 115,000 Soviet troops depart, it will not be the experts. It is worth recalling the mood and predictions when the Russians invaded in 1979 to prevent the toppling of a weak leftist regime in Kabul. The conventional wisdom, widely shared by diplomats, generals and pundits, forecast a quick Soviet vic-tory. A former U.S. ambassador to Afghani-stan assured journalists that the Russians would wipe out the resistance in months.

There was no comparison, experts argued, between the Soviet position in Afghanistan and that of the United States in Indochina. Sharing a border with Afghanistan, the Soviet Union could more readily resupply a Red Army that had shown its ssness in Prague and to Budapest. And for Moscow, the great geopolitical prize was to bring Soviet bases within striking distance of the Gulf.

Leonid Brezhnev seemed a model of toughness, Jimmy Carter a helpless spec-tator. Revolutions had toppled friendly rulers in Nicaragua and Iran; Americans were takeo hostage io Tehran; OPEC's oil prices surged. The late columnist Joseph Kraft reflected the mood when be wrote:

Where the Russians move on their own, the United States looks to allies, Where the Russians acted rapidly, the United States delays. Where the Russians engaged forces directly, the United States projects a buildup, and acts on such indirect matters as the Olympics and grain shipments. The balance, in short, seems unequal."

Viewed in hiodsight, the particulars were mostly correct but the lesson derived was oot: that democratic states somebow lack the grit and the stayiog power to compete with an adversary who is able to strike without scruple or open argument. strike without scrupie of open argument. The reverse has been nearer the truth. It is the Red Army that has been frustrated and humiliated by guerrillas, while an elect-ed Congress, starting under the Carter ad-ministration, has kept arms flowing steadi-ly, and uncontroversially, to the resistance. Agreed, Afghanistan is oot Vietnam. Successing Suriat lander pages had to face cessive Soviet leaders never had to face shouting anti-war demonstrators. But in shouling anti-war demonstrators. But in buth Asian wars the superpowers badly underestimated the tenacity and courage of Third World adversaries. Both struggled unsuccessfully to find indigenous allies. Not even the Soviet system proved able to ignore the outrage of Islamic states, con-demnation by the United Nations and the abeliance of initiations of the states. challenge of justifying to its own citizens the indefinite pursuit of a stalemated war.

Mikhail Gorbachev oow promises to withdraw Soviet forces in nine mooths, And he has yielded to the demand for a symmetrical cutoff in outside arms aid. If the Russians resume shipments to their comrades in Kabul, then Americans have the right to do likewise for the resistance.

This leaves urgent matters unresolved. What are the safeguards against cheating? How can aid be resumed through Pakistan without violating the agreement just signed in Geneva? Can live millioo Afghans retain their refugee status if they refuse to go home from camps in Pakistan?

This cruel war is not over and there is still plenty of room for debating the rea-sons for Moscow's shift in policy. But what a different light the Soviet retreat casts on the fears of 1979, and on the belief that democracies are pitiful, belpless giants compared with the Soviet juggernaut. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Now Let's Air Out the Brezhnev Years

M OSCOW — Not so long ago, tens of thou-grad, as well as war veterans, demanded that the city be given back its former name, Stalingrad. They were extremely distressed when their numerous demands and requests were all refused.

At just about the same time, tens of thousands of inhabitants of the city of Brezhnev, as well as war veterans, demanded that the city be given back its former name, Naberezhnye Chelny (Riverbank Boats). They rejoiced when their numerous demands and requests were satisfied. The inhabitants of Moscow's Brezhnev district, to inhabitants of Moscow's Brezznev district, to which its former name, Cheremushki, was re-stored, rejoiced along with them. Today, much more is being said of Stalin and his monstrous crimes than during Khrushchev's time. Stalin's cult entered the consciousness and subconscious of several generations of Sovier people too deeply, and it has turned out to be harder to overcome than the active opponents of Stalinism would have wanted.

Criticism of Brezhnev today still sounds muffled and not especially concrete. Nevertheless, even this criticism leveled against the Soviet leader less than six years after his death has proved enough for his cult to disappear with stunning speed. Nobody discusses the great role of Brezh-nev in the war, in economic construction or in the development of culture. Even in his native area, around Dneprodzerzhinsk, oobody sells buttons and calendars with portraits of Brezhnev.

For almost 15 years, our propaganda and agita-tion made extraordinary efforts to create a cult of Brezhnev: the great fighter for peace, the great Leninist, the great theoretician and so forth. However, this costly propaganda machinery ran idle. The cult thus did oot enter the consciousness or subconscious of the Soviet people, who related to him with an indifference that turned into a poorly concealed disdain in the last years of his life.

Creating of a cult of Brezhnev was like blowing up a rubber ball, Empty inside, he acquired un-precedented dimensions, pushing other figures into the background. But he quickly began to wrinkle and deflate as sooo as thoms of criticism pricked him. Historians and publicists are searchmg for a name for Brezhnev's times; era of groveling, of complete permissiveness and bureaucra-tism, of braking and stagnation, of gerontocracy. Was everything really so bad in Brezhnev's time? Didn't we call the 70s the calmest decade m the U.S.S.R.'s history? Yes, but this was the tranquillity of stagnatioo; problems were not solved but put off, and clouds continued to thicken.

Were the 70s not the years of detente? Yes, but it was an excessively fragile relaxation of tensions, the results of which a few people recognized al-ready in 1980, that is, during Brezhnev's lifetime. Didn't the Soviet people in the early 1980s live better than in the early 1960s? Yes, life improved, white-collar workers are borne in mind. Didn't the Soviet Union reach parity with America in strategic arms under Brezhnev? Yes, this goal was reached, but at too great a price for our economy and far beyond the limits of reasonable sufficiency. Moreover, the arms race continued, exhausting the country. The Soviet Union has recovered from the horrors of the Stalinist terror. But illegal repres-sions also were conducted in smaller measure under Brezhnev, preserving an atmosphere of moderate fear which was in turn supported by continual efforts to rehabilitate Stalin. Waste-fulness, irresponsibility and an atmosphere of complete permissiveness intensified. The cor-runtion which was parting society became more ruption which was rotting society became more open and brazen, abuse of authority and em-bezzlement became the norm of life. The lack of desire and ability to work well, political passivity and apathy, indifference to the moral-political values of socialism, the moral degradation of tens of millions of people, the gap between word and deed and the encouragement of the universal lie — all of this maimed the con-

the universal lie — all of this maimed the con-sciousness of an entire generation which we call at times, not without grounds, the lost generation. Throughout its history the Soviet Union has developed in spurts: from one sociopolitical crisis to another. Each regime moves the country for-ward but exhausts its own possibilities much earli-er than its representatives and leaders leave the political scene. The Brezhnev regime exhausted itself toward the middle of the 1970s. By pure coincidence, it was in 1975 that doctors first suc-ceeded in bringing Brezhnev out of a state of ceeded in bringing Brezhnev out of a state of clinical death, and also to restore his ability to move and speak which he lost for a time.

Recalling Brezhnev, we rarely see before us the healthy and relatively handsome man he still was in the beginning of the 1960s. Before us usually stands the image of a corpulent, sick man who spoke with difficulty and who appeared on our television screens just about every day. And the more this man weakened obysically, the more firmly he beld ooto power. The absolute power of the bureaucracy and Brezhnev's persooal circle was growing. By the late 1970s, Brezhnev was practically not involved in the affairs of the country, and a great oumber of decisions about economic and agricultural development remained only on paper. He withstood yet another stroke and an-other beart attack, and twice dectors had to bring him out of a state of clinical death. A. reanimation brigade orderly followed Brezhnev everywhere he went. He did not persecute doctors, as the suspicious Stalin did. The physical and mental incapacity of the leader enlarged the role and authority of his ever-growing circle. All of these people burried to occupy as many influential posts as possible. to receive titles and medals, to join the Communist Party Central Committee. Dagestan offered him and his circle kilograms of gold. Not only gold-embroidered khalas (padded cotton coats), which could have made even the Bukhara emirs jealous, found their way to Moscow from Central Asia, but also master-pieces of Eastern art. More than 40 foreign limousines were parked in Brezhnev's garage, and dozens of people looked after the hunting houses, dachas and personal domains. The stars of four U.S.S.R. Hero medals now decorated Brezhnev's breast, as did ao Order of Victory and 220 other orders and medals, including the gold decoration of a Lenin Literature Prize laureate. History repeats itself, said Hegel, once as tragedy, another time as farce. Karl Marx lowed to repeat those words. loved to repeat those words.

Stalinism was the tragedy. Brezhnevism, of course, was the farce, but it had a touch of tragedy. The history of this difficult struggle, which even today has oot been concluded, still has not been written, and it is possible that it will not be written any time soon. Criticism sounds very sharp, but it concerns all eras of stagnation, and not its individual and most risible representatives and creators.

The servile ones insisted that a great country should have a great leader, and so they began to manufacture a great one. His inflated merits corresponded to the inflated reports and fig-ures. This inflation was adopted at all levels. The good intentions with which everything began in 1966-67 gradually were replaced by end-less speeches. The mechanics of this sad process merit more detailed investigation by historians. Historians have been working for a loog time, and I think that politicians will outstrip them. Brezhnev's regime frightened everybody with its irrationality. Brezhnev spoke a lot about peace, but it is very difficult to trust a political group which rules a great country according the principle: After us the deluge.

To finisb with Brezhnevism ooce and for all it is not enough to take down signs bearing his name from city streets and squares. It is neces-sary to let some air into oot only the fearful '30s but also the suffocating '70s. The party confer-ence later this year would be an excellent opportunity and tribune for this. A Murder's Consequences

The satisfaction shown in private by Israeli authorities, the skill with which the murder of Abu Jihad was committed, even the fact that the Palestinian leader's wife and children were spared - it all leaves practically no room for doubt that the head of the PLO's military forces was indeed the victim of an Israeli commando, and that the order to eliminate him was given at the highest level in Jerusalem.

His assassination is a technical success for the Jewish state, but it could one day prove to have been a serious political blunder. The weekend's casualties in the occupied territories have been particularly heavy. This acceleration of the cycle of demonstration and repression, which the people who ordered the murder of Abu Jihad could easily foresee, may suit Likud, since it means that the debate on the future of the territories can be shelved for the time being, but is it good for Israel? That is doubtful. Along with Abu Jihad, the peace plan of U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz has also taken a mortal blow. And Yasser Arafat should have little trouble continuing to play deaf to the "suggestions" of Mikhail Gorbachev advising recognition of Israel and of its security interests.

- Le Monde (Paris).

The deafening silence of the Israeli government speaks volumes about the moral condition of the Jewish state on the eve of its 40th anniversary. If ever there was a case for a prompt and convincing denial on the highest authority, it was surely when Mr. Arafat accused Mossad, the Israeli secret service, of the assassination.

Jackson Is a Protester, Not a Governor

MAYOR Koch, who never has been known as a disciple of Lord Chesterfield in matters of manoers, has been presiding as the pyro-maniac at the bonfire of the Democratic vanities in the run-up to New York's primary. In that capacity, he has said that Jesse Jackson's programs would hanking the cruster in three weeks and leave it defenseless in six weeks. A Jackson spokesperson ac-cused the mayor of "exaggeration." That was an ambiguous retort. Should the mayor have said six and 12 weeks? Mr. Jackson, responding to the charge that his promises would bust the budget, implied that real moral-ists do not do arithmetic. He said: Rosa Parks didn't have a budget. she had a mission and a mess True. But Ms. Parks (who ignited the Montomery, Alabama, bus boycott 33 years ago) was seeking a seat on a bus, not in Lincoln's chair.

I offer a paradox: With the best or of the Jew as being able to bleed to Ed Koch's inaccurate assumption worst will in the world, no American politician can save Israel or destroy I hope it is inaccurate - that we are, it. The wheels of history turn too powerfully. The fate of Israel is by by now, by and large, conditioned reflexes - that is, machines, buttons now connected to the fate of the world. One does well not to choose an American president because he claims he will be good for Israel. The great-est reversals in history have come often enough from statesmen who began as hearty supporters of what they would eventually, by the logic of events, be obliged to betray. Israel is both larger than the will of politicians and more vulnerable

HARTFORD, Connecticut - It was a typical scenario, woefully typical: two small boys who, from a distance, appeared to be engaged in the wholesome pursuit of examining shells they had gathered along the beach. LONDON CITY AIRPORT

London's once decaying Docklands have been dramatically transformed into one of the great urban regeneration projects in Europe this century. Catalyst to this change is London City Airport, just six miles from the Bank of England at the heart of London's financial district — the City.

Docklands: The City's New Runway to Europe

ONDON City Airport, which was opened in November by Queen Elizabeth II; is Britain's first new airport in 40 years. It owes its existence to six years of hard work, imagination and private enterprise on the part of civil engineers John Mowlem, who own and operate the airport, Brymon Airways and the London Docklands Development Corporation.

What had become a wasteland, quietly rotting since maritime operations at the London Docks went into decline at the turn of the century, has now been mastermind. ed by the corporation into a massive commercial, industrial, residential and leisure mix. It is a sort of Manhattan, colored by the occasional glimpse through office blocks and waterside gardens of a windsurfer's bright sail.

London City Airport, built at a cost of some £35 million ($64.05 million), is situated on a 92-acre site bounded by the Royal Albert and King. George docks to the north of the Thames, with the runway extending the whole length of the original wharf that separated them. The whole operation was targeted from the start at the business traveler, with extras such as a maximum check-in time of 15 minutes and a high degree of comfort - even elegance - in the terminal building.

Sooching shades of hluegray and dusty pink, waterside views and the reassurance of Network Nine - the new office facilities group, where anything from a photofax to a press conference can he arranged - combine to create an executive suite effect, a world away from the usual hectic airport crowds and atmosphere.

Both airlines operating from London City, Brymon and the recently renamed London City Airways, are using the Dash 7, "the nippy white bird" as it is affectionately called --- a four engined, shorttakeoff-and-landing aircraft. Licences have been granted to the two carriers for a total of ten 'shorr hop' routes. The inicial concentration is on the run - with Brymon's Plymouth service timed to connect with their Paris flights. London City Airways' new Amsterdam service heralds other destinations to be in service

shortly. - Caroline Walker Landon-based freelance writer

The High Risk of Building a City Airport

OHN Mowlem, one of Britain's leading construction groups, dis-Jplayed considerable entrepreneurial spirit when it decided six years ago to build an airport in London's docklands

Building an airport was nothing new to Mowlem: it had the Falkland Islands and Diego Garcia airports, among others, to its credit. But managing an airport was an entire-Paris and Brussels business ... ly new venture, carrying consequently a high degree of risk. Sir Philip Beck, Mowlem's chairman, believed City business people could be attracted to the airport by a high-quality service railored to their needs. Mowlem spent about £35

As to further development in Britzin, Sheffield lacks an airport, but it quite possibly also lacks a large enough catchment area to make building one a viable proposition.

"The fact that a city has no airport doesn't mean that it would be a good idea to build one. There may be good reasons why one bas not been built," he said. Sir Philip also made the point that there is nothing new about construction companies getting involved in the provision of major infrastructure investments. - Margaret Coles for Air France in terms of the numbers of passengers transported - over a million a year since the early 1980s. These strong connections with London were given a new dimension when the airline teamed with Brymon Airways to operate a joint service between the new London City Airport and Charles de Gaulle Airport. It has been designed to provide facilities that particularly suit European and Boitish business travelers.

"We have really geared ourselves up to meet their needs," says Mr. Bill Blakemore of Nerwork Nine. "We have taken the concept of a workstation one stage further to create a room which is really a mixture of an office and a telephone kiosk. The idea is to provide a place where the business person can spend half an hour or so before flying more: "Initially, though, we see this as a secondary market, until the airport's business has built up. In the early scages we expect mainly to serve the business community in the area surrounding the airport. We are promoting the center as a good place for local business people to meet, as well as talking to business people as they pass through the airport."

One of the most sophisticated of the center's services is the telephone meeting facility. It allows up to 40 people in different locations to participate in a meeting.

The simplest and cheapest way of holding such a meeting is via the Rendez-Vous Conference Call. This entails using British Telecom's telephone linking equipment and simply dialing a number at a preamanged time. Alternatively, an operator can be asked to dial our to each of the partici-Danes.

Another useful boardroom facility for meetings and presentations is the electronic writing board system. This enables an operator to create images or next which can be transmitted to several locacions. By using the board in conjunction with the telephone meeting system, charts, data and diagrams can be modified by people in different locations as the meeting progresses. For the businessman or woman in a hurry, the small one-person offices, complete with microcomputet, will probably prove the most valuable facility. As executives speed through the airport, these facilities will let them talk to their offices, adjust sales figures or update and print out high-quality reports before leaving for meetings. "We can show them how to reach their base or, if they wish, get them through to British Telecom's travel and insurance services," says Mr. Blakemore. As he explains; "We've set out to cater not just for today's business travel needs but also for future needs. We see our task as helping to encourage business people to use this airport rather than any other, by adding value to what London's docklands can offer. As we put that message across more, and the passenger throughput increases, our inrention is that the business mayeler sector of the market eventually becomes the main SCCTOR."

An Ovation For Beene

the annals of fashion. Beene is celebrating his 25th year in husiness with great style.

Donna Karan's fans were also enthusiastic. The designer had managed to make her long, slender clothes look as sexy as her shorter styles last season. She is still simplifying the matter of dressing for contemporary women, basing many of her outfits on body suits. Her contribution this season: the knitted jacket that is as supple as a sweater.

The Beene collection actually succeeded in making the current hemline controversy seem irrelevant, and oot just because the designer is carrying forward his longtime preoccupation with the jump suit. He likes the way it looks, and he believes that, like the Karan body suit, the one-piece jump suit simplifies dressing. He shows it with raincoats and high-waisted jackets for day; in satin with cashmere tops at night. But jump suits are only part of the fashion story. Skirts and dresses remain short, a few inches above the knee. It is the length Beene preferred long before every designer got on the short-skirt bandwagon a year ago. Bib-top jumpers skirts in spongy wool fabrics that match wide, swingy coats, and princess dresses are some of the short styles.

For evening, Beene has a predilection for ankle lengths, usually with full skirts and slightly lifted waistlines, though he shows some flonr-length styles as well. His inventive cuts include an evening dress made with a single seam, slaning from under one arm to a thigh-high hemline slit.

But even more imaginative is the way Beene selects and combines fabrics. He edges Ultrasuede jackets with scalloped bands of lace, for instance, and lines a striped gray wool coat with flowered silk. While some day clothes are shown with thick,

By Mike Zwerin International Herald Tribune PARIS — Claiming that so-and-so was the first to do this or that often overlooks somebody else in Peoria, Bordeaux or Odessa who did the same thing without your knowledge. But this is a simple statement of fact: Martin Meissoonier introduced African music to the developed world. It's a fact he has second thoughts about. "I guess it's true," he shrugs, ap-pearing somewhat world-weary for his 31 years. "I was the first one to put African music together with electronic instruments." Like sci-entist Leo Szillard who turned pacifist after contributing to the developmeot of the atomie bomh, Meissonnier has come to regret what he unleashed.

His responsibility began when he managed the first - triumphal -European tour of the Nigerian star Fela Anikulapo Kuti in 1981. He had been managing tours for and producing records by jazzmen like Don Cherry and the Turkish percussionist Okay Temiz. He loved jazz, he has always avoided working with anything he does not love. But after hearing his music, Fela became an irresistible passioo. Meissonnier was only 24, he idolized the man, he had a lot to learn. He scheduled another tour six months later.

"It was a total disaster," he says, "It was too soon. There were something like 90 people at one concert. Bookings were canceled, promoters went bankrupt. I found myself paying for Fela's road crew, musicians and his entourage of 70 people staying in four-star hotels, ordering room service for almost three weeks. The meter was ticking like crazy. I went into receivership."

The Fela experience cured him of any temptatioo to promote more tours, even by people he loved. And serving as executive producer on Fela's albums "Black President" and "Original Sufferhead" cured him of Fela. "It was an awful experience. He has such an enormous ego. He's impossible. I still respect longer for what he is."

The passion for African music remained. Chris Blackwell, founder and owner of Island Records, sent him to Lagos to work with another popular Nigerian bandleader, King Sunny Ade. Meissonnier and Ade chose material and then went to London to record in 1982. Fifteenminute oumbers were cut in half, and the sound was modernized through the addition of synthesizers and rhythm machines; the milestone albums "Julu Music" and

Modernization, Recovery Are Watchwords in Oslo

DAI-ICHI KANGYO BANK (SCHWEIZ) AG

By STELLA BUGGE

Rettlers SLO --- Norway's stock market, which took one of the worst tumbles of any stock exchange in last year's share crash, is recovering and entering a needed period of modernization, share analysis say. Prices have risen by 20 percent since the turn of the year, largely on sentiment that the "market has been oversold and that the minority Labor govern-ment has begun to tackle serious economic problems with wage restraints.

But new administrative measures have also increased investor confidence, said Roy Halvorsen, a spokesman for the Oslo Stock Exchange. Share analysis agree that the introduction of electronic trading last month, which replaced an old-fashioned auction system in use since the exchange was founded 150 years ago, has greatly im-proved securities transactions, the market with more information and improves liquidity," said Lars Gjoervad, a broker with the Oslo firm N.A. Jensen.

All trades, both on and off the exchange, must be reported , All flages bout on and prices are now continuously updated. The system has brought more turnover to the exchange.

The government also has plans for the Oslo exchange. Within the next few weeks, the legislature is expected to approve a rigorous law on share trading that is aimed at ridding the bourse of persistent allegations of insider trading. The law, first proposed last summer, would introduce stiffer prison terms for insider trading and allow the government to write the exchange rules and appoint members of its board.

"That, and the electronic system should help rid the exchange i of its rather clubby, rumor-driven image," said one broker, who declined to be identified. "It will give us the same standard of legislation as in many other countries," said the deputy bourse commissioner, Lars Oftedal-Broch.

7. The Norwegian Finance Ministry also announced long-await-: ed guidelines for options trading last month that may become law "by the middle of this year. 1.1

THE PLAN allows for more than one clearing house, but limits trading to the Oslo bourse and allows only "call" options, which give the right to buy. "Put" options, the "right to sell, have been omitted because of fears that selling stock investors are taking a fairly cautious attitude.

At the peak of last year's rise, foreign investors accounted for about a quarter of turnover. The all-share index soared by more than 50 percent from January 1987 to hit an all-time high of 442.44 on Sept. 21. But after the October crash, the index tumbled to a low of 241:46'on Dec. 16.

241.46 of Dec. 16. The recent rally pushed the index above 300 points last week amid definite signs that foreign investment is edging back into the market. On Monday it closed at 291.35.

"Foreigners feel more inclined to invest in Norway now than at -the end of last-year, but they will be the first to go if the market ,-shows signs of cracking," said Cecilic Aall, resident vice president of Citharke Norman arket of Citibank's Norwegian subsidiary. "The foreign interest is back, but it is highly selective," one broker said. "They only buy top blue chips like Norsk Nydro and Norsk Data."

Last month, electronic trading replaced a 150year-old auction system.

Pirelli, the Italian tire maker, was considerably outbid by Bridges-tone Corp. of Japan last month in its attempt to buy Firestone.

Pirelli will acquire Armstrong Tire's manufacturing plants in Des Moines, lowa; Hanford, Califor-nia; and Nashville, Tennessee, as well as its tire cord and fabric manufacturing plant in Laurel Hill, North Carolina.

But Decline U.S. Firm In Market Poses Threat

By Claudia H. Deutsch New York Times Service

New York Times Service NEW YORK — It is 1983 and Harley-Davidson Inc., the last surviving American maker of motorcycles, is begging the gov-ernment for help. The 1982 re-cession has all but killed the motorcycle market and Harley, leaking red ink, claims that the Japanese are dumping their ex-cess inventory in American markets. The International Trade Commission agrees. It slaps Jap-anese companies with a 49 percent tariff on large bikes, a tariff to be reduced over the next five years.

Skip ahead to 1986. Harley is in Washington again - this time, not in supplication but in triumph. Its two plants are humming along at peak efficiency. Its bikes, despite $10,000 price tags, are best-sellers. And its income statement is comfortably swathed in black.

Remove the tariff a year early, Harley suggests. Washington, with much hoopla, culminating in a personal visit by President Ronald Reagan to the Harley plant in York, Pennsylvania, willingly complies. Harley has been profitably roaring along ever since.

But was the motorcycle tariff a good idea? Or did it, by raising the prices of Japanese bikes, deal a body blow to motorcycling in the United States?

No one disputes that the Japanese companies were dumping bikes. But, motorcycle aficionados say, most of those bikes appealed to riders who were unlikely to have bought the huge, mean-looking Harleys in the first place. "The Harley tariff took away the ability to find different types of motorrycles at reason-able prices," said Paul Dean, editor of Cycle World magazine, "And that did not do the motorcycle industry any good." U.S. motorcycle sales have been declining for two years. Part of that decline stems from the general aging of the popula-tion. But part may well be traced to the tariff. Harleys have always been too big and too expensive to serve as entry-level bikes. And the tariff took many Japanese bikes out of range for beginners.

Harley is trying to turn the trend around. The company has introduced a new model, with an 883cc engine, at the -- for Har-ley -- astonishingly low price of $3,995. Any 883 owner who Davidson dealership in Glendale, California, Michael J. Lombardi, who runs Frank Lombardi wants to buy a big. $10,000 Har-& Sons Inc., Harley's Staten Island dealership, is even more blunt: "I used to feel bad taking ley within a year can turn in the 883 and have the full purchase customers' money, the quality was so bad."

What has helped Harley most in the past few years was not protectionism hut cash. In 1986 learning to fly in a 747. And unless people start out on lesspowerful bikes now, there will be no one to trade up to a 1,340cc, the size of Harley's mainstay bike, in the 1990s. "In many ways," said Mr. Dean, "Harley shot itself in the foot."

The sad thing, many say now, is that Harley did not have to dn from licensing its name for Tit. Harley riders are a fiercely loyal group. Had Harley's repushirts, bags, even cigarettes. The licensing not only brings in nice fees, but "it gives us national advertising that we could not aftation not already been tar-nisbed, it is unlikely the Japanese ford to do," Mr. Beals said. unions are getting ready. As problems mount for the embattled chairman of Texas Air, there is new specula-tion that Mr. Lorenzo might be forced to sell all or part of the nation's largest airline holding company. Its Continental Airlines and Eastern Airlines account for nearly 20 percent of U.S. air traffic.

Last week, the U.S. Transportation De-partment ordered an investigation of Texas Air 10 determine its financial and management fitness to run the two airlines.

At the same time, T. Allan McArtor, the Federal Aviation Administrator, said his agency had begun to inspect each of East-ern's 267 planes because the carrier had amassed about $823,000 in outstanding proposed penalties for a variety of violations.

On Sunday, the secretary of transporta-tion, James Burnley 4th, said the FAA would extend its scrutiny to Continental's fleet, Mr. Burnley said he had decided to broaden the inspection program to Continental after an FAA computer sweep last week found about $1 million in outstanding penaltics against the airline.

Mr. Burnley said that he doubted that, as a appointment of a "czar" to temporarily over-WASHINGTON - Frank A. Lorenzo, result of the various investigations, his agen- see Texas Air's finances or forcing the company to divest itself of either Eastern or Continental.

The unions have met with financial advisers to discuss what kind of offer they might consider making for the holding company or its airlines, which are now under the cloud of a U.S. investigation.

analysts said, the U.S. airline system would be thrown into chaos.

"I am not predicting that it will happen," said Lee R. Howard, executive vice president of Airline Economics, a Washington consulting concern, "but in the event of decertificaoon, bedlam would exist temporarily. Other carriers simply could not move in that rapidly to fill the gap and so people who planned to travel on that carrier would be in trouble."

Some analysts said that actions less seri-tions or walk off the job. Eastern made ready ous than decertification might be taken by the regulators. These could include federal workers.

Texas Air has asserted that its unions are responsible for what it calls a smear campaign. In recent weeks, Eastern's unions have won victories in the courts, gathered sup-porters in Congress and kept Texas Air execunives busy fending off attacks on several fronts.

The unions and most industry analysts believe that Mr. Lorenzo had sought to force a showdown with Eastern's unions in which they would have to accept big wage reduc-

But the adverse court rulings and Transportation Department's action appeared to rule out the possibility that Mr. Lorenzo could force the showdown on his terms. On Wall Street, some analysis speculated that Mr. Lorenzo would be forced either to settle with his unions or to sell.

Last fall, Eastern declared that an impasse had been reached in negonations with the International Association of Machinists, the airline's largest union. Since then, the two sides have been meeting with a mediator attempting to resolve the dispute.

"Having come to something of an impasse as to the balance of power, maybe Charlie Bryan," the head of the machinists, who has fought with a series of Eastern manage-ments, "would show a wave of statesmanship, and Frank Lorenzo would show a wave of statesmanship, and they would meet at Camp David and settle this thing." said Louis A. Marckesano, an analyst at Janney Montgomery Scott.

At the same time, the unions have been meeting with financial advisers to discuss what kind of offer for the airline or airlines might succeed. Eastern's pilots retained Boooe Co., an investment advisory firm set up by the corporate raider T. Boone Pickens. The company put together a proposal to WASHINGTON - U.S. industry used less of its operating capacity in March, the third consecutive monthly decline, but several heavy manufacturing sectors showed higher operating rates, the Federal Reserve Board reported Monday.

U.S. factories, mines and utilities operated at 82.3 percent of capacity last month, down from 82.4 percent in February and a revised 82.6 percent in January, the Fed reported. But the March rate was still far above the 79.7 percent level of March 1987, indicating that most industrial sectors remained busy.

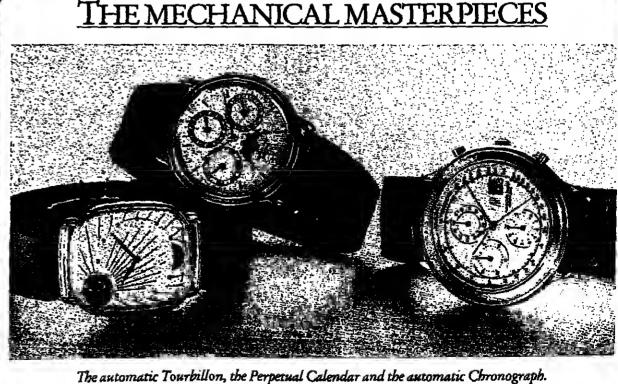

The March decline reflected lower operating rates at utility companies, including electric power plants, and in the production of nondurable goods, items designed to last less than three years, the central bank said.

Despite the overall decline, the mining industry raised its operating rate to 80.3 percent of total capacity from 79.8 percent in February, while the rate for durable goods industries rose to 80.2 percent from 80.1 percent, it said.

The operating rate at all manufacturing industries slipped to 82.5 percent last month from 82.6 percent in February. Among utilities it fell to 81.8 percent from 82.8 percent.

PARIS --- Banque Nationale de Paris reported Monday that its consolidated net profit fell 5 percent in 1987 to 3.01 billion francs ($533.9 million) as it boosted its capital in a move to comply with new global banking standards.

The result compared with a 3.17 billion franc profit in 1986. The state-owned bank said its paid-in capital, bolstered by nondistribut-ed profit from 1987, rose to 24.6 billion francs from 21.7 billion. The capital increase, which raised total equity plus provisions to 30.9 billion francs, will help the bank meet new standards for capi-

Management is already meeting union opposition over its attempts to cut costs. JAL's fight against high costs has been helped by a fall in fuel prices, but not longer term it will have to trim the topenough to offset labor expenses, which are almost 25 percent of total costs. Analysts say JAL formerly gave in too quickly to union demands, thus inflating wages and staffing levels.

JAL has more people in its cockpits and more flight attendants per passenger than any other airline, a spokesman said.

The company hopes to cut 1.000 members of its Japanese ground staff of 12.000 by 1991, moving many of them to affiliates. The union representing JAL flight crews

About 70 percent of JAL's costs are incurred in Japan. Thus, the airline gains little from the depreciation of some other currencies against the yen. "To some extent JAL is a high ven bene-

But JAL faces rising competition in the overseas market, where it held a monopoly among Japanese airlines until 1986. About 60 percent of its revenue comes from international passenger traffic.

Competition is also rising in the domes-tic market, which provides 20 perceot of its revenue. While JAL is likely to lose international market share in the long term, the airline should be able to increase its domestic market share, analysis say.

The Transport Ministry has allocated JAL domestic routes formerly held by other Japanese carriers. They in turn have beeo given more international flights.

BUSINESS ROUNDUP

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, APRIL 19, 1988

HARLEY: U.S. Bike Maker Roaring Along, for Now and had revenue of about $49 mil- exclusively for the American mar-

(Continued from first finance page) develop hedges against the declining motorcycle market. Harley has contracts to supply bomb casings for the military, to make computer peripherals and to machine parts. And late last year il acquired Holiday Ramhler, a leading maker of recreational vehicles and of delivery vans. The company recently introduced the Utilimaster, a small walk-in van that uses a chassis made hy Harley. Harley's recent tactics have won it fans on Wall Street. "They have kept a close eve to the bottom line. and have improved their product. their processes, their marketing and their mix," said William D. Tichy, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds. James Schainuck, an analyst with Ladenburg. Thalman. said: "Harley's on a roll!"

That Harley's success should fol-low going public is ironic. For this was Harley's second trip to the public well. And in many ways, its troubles began with its first trip. In 1965, Harley, then in operation for 62 years, had a niche that no other company could come near. The BMW motorcycle was the Mercedes of the bike world; the Thumph was the main sporty model; Honda was known primarily for

"hog." that was a motorcycle. There was nothing delicate about it. It had big grips, hig levers, big foot rests, a hig engine. It made a ibroaty, rumbling, threatening sound, It was the Harley hog that Marion Brando rode in "The Wild One"; it was the Harley hog that leather-jacketed bikers roared into LOWD OR Few Harley riders did the sorts of unsavory things that were associated with motorcycle gangs. But they wanted to look as though they could. "You pull up next to a guy in a station wagon and you're riding a Harley, that guy gives you respect." said Mr. Dean of Cycle World. "If you were riding a Honda, he'd public. And in 1969, at the height for long-distance traveling, of the conglomerate era, Harley The new competition hit Harley of the conglomerate era. Harley was bought by American Machine at a bad time. It was saddled with & Foundry Co. AMF was a volume-oriented company, and Harley got its wish cash. It had losses of $25 million in for growth. By 1973 it was churning out 37,000 cycles a year and sales of $122 million. But Harley's relatively unsophisticated design and production systems could not keep up with that level of production.

"AMF was just about the raination of Harley-Davidson." said one dealer. They had no quality immediately rather than placed in control. They forced Harley to stock. The new system improved overproduce hikes, and they forced us to take them." Yet such was the Harley mystique that dealers and hikers alike willingly did the frequent repair said work that Harleys required. They might have done so indefinitely. But AMF did the unthinkahle: It insisted that its name, not Harley's. be emblazoned on the bikes' fuel tanks. "Harley people refused to buy AMF bikes, and sales ICVS plunged," said Mr. Dean. By the time Mr. Beals joined Harley in 1975, the company's quality problems were formidable. So he went into high gear. He in-sisted that every Harley bike, not just a sample, be inspected as it came off the line. He changed the tests the company used. He elicited workers' suggestions for shoring up quality. And he asked AMF for $80 million to help Harley build a new type of engine.

AMF, which was trying to huild its industrial businesses, refused to provide the money. So in 1981 Mr. Beals and 12 other Harley officers took Harley private.

By then, the Japanese had become a major force in the motorcycle market. No longer content with selling finy bikes, they were making 750cc and even larger motorcycles. In 1979 Honda opened its Maryssmile at you." ville, Ohio, plant. Shortly there-By the mid-1960s Harley was making about 15,000 hikes a year. a 1,000cc bike that was designed lion. To grow larger than that, it ket. It was as big as a Harley, yet needed cash. So in 1965, it went was more comfortable and reliable $70 million in debt from the huyout, and it was hemorrhaging 1981 and $32 million in 1982. When the 1982 recession hit, Harley was close to going belly-up. The next year the company asked for, and received, tariff protection. Harley adopted a version of Japanese just-in-time inventory control in which suppliers deliver quality-guaranteed parts that are used quality. "If you have a continuous flow of parts and materials, you can't tolerate poor quality or ma-chine maintenance," Mr. Beals

Now Harley must, as Mr. Beals put it, "persuade the public that while our hikes still look like Harleys, they no longer leak like Har-

Slowly but steadily, customers are responding to the "new" Harley. When the California Highway Patrol, which stopped riding Har-leys in the mid-1970s because they were unstable and leaky, switched hack to Harleys in 1984, "there was an uproar from every officer in the fleet," said Edward Prieto, motorcycle training sergeant for the California Highway Patrol Academy. Today, many of the most vocal complainers have become "die-hard Harley riders," he said.

Whether a new generation of motorcyclists will emerge remains a question. Beginner bikes remain scarce, Honda has introduced some new scooters and lightweight bikes that might attract first-time riders, but they are unlikely to have the same impact on motorcycling that the old Honda 50ccs and 90ccs did. Still, Harley dealers are banking that, even if the overall market continues to decline, their share will remain high. Most predict a stellar 1988, and few fear the 1990s.

satisfactorily in an inflationary environment. Our world-wide prospecting programmes have been continued; there are no discoveries of economic significance to report.

The employment practices section of the annual report records the progress that has been achieved in important areas. I would mention in particular the this direction in the year under review. The May 1987 election for the White Chamber of Parliament was fought largely on the issues of sanctions and security, and the response of the electorate, significantly, showed a marked swing to the right, with Afrikaansspeaking voters leaving the ruling National party for the Conservative party, while English-speakers swung from the Progressive Federal party and the New Republic party to the Nationalists. The overall effect was to make the Government much more concerned about pressure from its right - the Conservative party having replaced the Progressives as the official opposition - than from its left, and in consequence the reform process came almost to a halt. The Group Areas Act, one of the last great pillars of apartheid, is to be amended, not scrapped, and it remains to be seen whether the changes to be tabled will be bold enough to relieve the pressure on the few "grey" residential areas that have been tolerated.

acquire Texas Air for $1.2 billion, with more than 25 percent of the financing coming from union pen-sion funds. Under that plan, the unions would also agree to wage concessions to help finance operations and debt repayment, and borrow the rest.

Eastern's unions made an offer for the airline once before, in the midst of the tumult that surrounded Mr. Lorenzo's purchase of the carrier. Early in 1986, the three unions at Eastern -- the machinists, flight attendants and Air Line Bilots Association - hired a law firm to belp develop a strategy in the event of a management change. If in the end, according to a source familiar with the effort, the unions decided not to make offer for the whole airline.

Instead, the unions encouraged members to individually purchase shares of Eastern to add their voling strength to the 22 percent of Eastern's common stock the unions controlled under a Wage Investment Program negotiated earlier with the company. When Mr. Lorenzo actually made his offer for Eastern, the unions shifted tactics. They subsequently hired Kelso Co., which located a financial source for the union effort to buy Eastern. They made an offer of their own for the airline, but it was too late.

- Timing is still a question for the unions as they debate a bid for Texas Air should Mr. Lorenzo be forced to sell. "It's possible there could be a sale by the end of the wear," said a source familiar with ne union situation.

" He said the "Texas Air empire is under a significant amount of financial pressure now and there's 11----likely to be more within the next six months." Thus, the unions appear willing to wait and let the pressure from the various legal and government attacks huild on Mr. Lorenzo. If Mr. Lorenzo is eventually forced to sell, however, the unions insist they have no interest in buying a stripped-down version of Eastern. If they buy it, said a source familiar with the union position, they want basically the same airline Mr. Lorenzo bought two years ago - complete with its own computerized reservations system, the Pofitable air shuttle service between Washington, New York and Boston, and all the routes it owned at the time of purchase. Eastern has about $600 million in cash, which could provide sufficient funds for a leveraged purchase by an employee group, the Salomon Brothers Inc. analyst Julius Maldutis noted in a recent re-(WP, NYT, LAT) JJOQ business, indisputably still to hold that position at its centenary. Yet that is the achievement of De Beers Consolidated Mines.

It is no less gratifying that in our centenary year the Central Selling Organisation should have been able to announce record sales of rough diamonds, and the Company to announce record profits and declare its highest dividend ever.

The sharp fall in prices on world stock exchanges from the middle of October understandably caused hesitancy in diamond markets. Fulfilling its traditional role, the CSO responded by severely reducing its sales at the November and December sights and maintained its cautious policy into the new year. This action, together with reports of good Christmas sales in the retail trade, resulted in a restoration of confidence during the first quarter of 1988 and the marker is once again firm.

Further growth.

For the fifth successive year world retail sales of diamond jewellery established a record, principally as a result of increasing consumer confidence and spending - a reflection in turn of further growth in the world economy.

Sales of natural industrial diamonds and of synthetic abrasives and polycrystalline diamond (PCD) products were a record in both volume and value and the trend has continued into 1988.

The Argyle mine in Australia, which in terms of volume is the world's largest producer, has been operating as full capacity for the last two years. The absorption by the market of most of the cuttable portion of its production has been remarkable. This has been greatly facilitated by the efforts of the CSO, both in its methods of assortment and sale and through its consumer advertising; by the constructive relationship between it and Argyle Diamond Sales; and by the ingenuity of the Indian industry, which manufactures the majority of these stones, in working them.

Debswana Agreement.

An important development during the year was the exchange by De Beers Borswana Mining Company (Debswana), in which the Government of Botswana is an equal parmer, of part of the stock of diamonds accumulated in the depression of the early eighties for a five per cent shareholding in De Beers itself. The arrangements also entitle Debswana to representation on the boards of De Beers and the Diamond Trading Company. As the new mines discovered by De Beers' geologists in Borswana have been brought into production in the last two decades, Debswana has become the western world's major producer of diamonds, by value, and it is entirely appropriate that it should participate fully in the decision-making of De Beers and the CSO. I am sure the arrangement will further strengthen the stability and confidence of the industry as a whole.

Total production from De Beers' mines and Debswana in 1987 was marginally lower at 22,842,586 carats. The mines have continued to control costs industry and its educational requirements we have introduced a new system of liaison between the mines and secondary school leachers and pupils which should be of benefit to all concerned.

Legislation removing job reservation in the mining industry has at last been passed but not yet brought into operation, pending the determination of new regulations. It is highly important that this long-outstanding matter should be brought to finality quickly, and that the regulations should facilitate the award of certificates of competency to qualified blacks.

The Anglo American and De Beers Chairman's Fund and Educational Trust approved expenditure during the year of R49 million, of which some 80 per cent is on education, primarily to help redress the imbalance between the black and white educational systems.

De Beers strongly supports rapid reform towards equal opportunity and dignity for all South Africans, based on full participation in the political process. Regrettably, I cannot report any notable progress in KwaZulu/Natal Indaba.

A measure of consolation may be found in the fact that some of the positive changes made in earlier years have continued to bear fruit. In industrial relations, in education, in housing and in black participation in business, particularly in the informal sector, there has been progress. A joint executive authority between Natal and KwaZulu has been established and the Government, notwithstanding some discouraging statements, is said still to be considering the innovative constitutional proposals of the KwaZulu/Natal Indaba.

South Africa continues to be governed under a state of emergency, and recently far-reaching new restrictions were imposed upon a number of political and semi-political organisations. It is not easy to discern the reasons for what was done: if it is indeed true that South Africa can only be governed by such methods as these, then the need for constitutional reform is obviously greater than ever.

Despite sanctions and disinvestment there has been a marked recovery in economic activity, and in the black urban areas at least there seems to be some improvement in the quality of life. The Government's major concern now is to embark on a wide-ranging reform of the economic system. That is certainly as important as it is welcome, but it has to be realised that economic progress and political reform go together. One effect of the recent bannings may be to intensify sanctions and disinvestment, counterproductive though they have proved to be politically, and damaging as they are to the livelihood of those they ostensibly seek to help. More than ever it is urgently necessary to negotiate and implement a constitution which can provide equal opportunity and political participation for all, protected by an entrenched Bill of Rights.

The full Chairman's Statement is contained in the Annual Report of the Company for the year ended 31st December 1987 which was posted to registered Shareholders on 18th April 1988.

In Europe, the pound reached its highest level in more than six years. The pound ended trading in New York at $1,9005, up from $1.8895 at the close Friday, and at 3.1558 DM, up from 3.1412 DM,

The dollar ended mixed against major currencies Monday, Dealers said trading was quiet but that the dollar remained under pressure.

The French franc closed at 5.6385 in New York, up from 5,6375 at the close Friday, the Swiss franc at 1.3730, up from 1.3725, the mark at 1.6605, down from 1.6625, and the Japanese yen at 124.25, up from 123.95.

Earlier in London, the pound closed at $1.9045 and at 3.1558 dealers said. DM, up sharply from Friday's closes of $1,8890 and 3.1363. Dealers in New York said the Federal Reserve System intervened in support of the dollar when the pound approached $1.90. Dealers said the Fed, apparently acting on behalf of the Bank of England, sold pounds for dollars when sterling hit its highest levels against the dollar since 1921. "It seems as though everybody wants to get into sterling," said one British bank trader.

Martin Rieben, a foreign exchange trader with Swiss Bank Corp., said that despite continued pressure on the dollar, foreign exchange traders were reluctant to sell the currency short because of the reaffirmation by the govern-ments of the G-7, the Group of Seven industrial democracies, that they will support the dollar. In London, the dollar ended the day mixed after its bearish tone was offset by the tension in the Gulf,

It closed down slightly at 1.6575 DM from 1.6580 at the opening and 1.6600 nt Friday's elose, and up at 124.10 yen from 123.80. Dealers attributed the pound's popularity both to the relatively high interest rates available in Britain and to a lack of investor appetite for dollars.

Thursday's poor U.S. trade fig-ures for February, coupled with worrying signs of inflationary pressures, have turned dollar sentiment bearish, they said. But with central banks of the G-7, the Group of Seven industrial nations, expected to renew their concerted intervention around 1.6550 DM, there is little room for dollar maneuvering, they added. "People were looking around for a currency that's moving and naturally went for the pound," said another British bank dealer. By the close in Europe, there was no sign the Bank of England had intervened to hold back sterling.

Several dealers said they thought the bank would begin a limited intervention above 3.17 DM and then, if the pound's rise continued, announce another interest rate cut. The Bank of England last engipeered a cut in interest rates, by half a percentage point to 8.0 per-cent, on April 8, in an effort to stem the pound's rise. The dollar had started Monday a shade lower in Europe but firmed sharply during the morning on re-ports of a U.S. strike on Iranian oil rigs, followed by an Iranian response against an oil platform. In earlier trading, the dollar was fixed in Frankfurt at 1.6621 DM, down from 1.6643, and at 5.646 French francs in Paris, down from

Wide Gaps Remain in Farm Talks

VANCOUVER, British Columbia - The U.S. trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter, said after two days of negotiations that a wide gap remained between the United States and the European Community in the effort to cut farm subsidies.

Mr. Yeutter and Willy De Clerco, EC minister for external relations, met over the weekend with the Japanese trade minister, Hajime Tamura, and his Canadian counterpart, John Crosbie.

The subsidies cost the United States and the EC proposed that they be ended by the year 2000. Mr. Crosbie, assessing the talks on a wide variety of global trade issues, said, "We believe good progress has been made so far."

But Mr. Yeutter said progress had not been ignificant and if the group did not reach an "early barvest" on the farm subsidies issues, the U.S. Congress might take action on its own that could curb world trade rather than expand it. "All of us are spending too much on agriculture," he said.

Insider Trading: Will Tokyo's New Laws Change Anything? The case attracted attention partly be-

"The market here is growing and we want to make sure it's healthy growth." said Shigeru Kobayashi, a Finance Ministry official. Although regulators and local brokerage bouses rarely acknowledge it, the use of inside information is a widespread phenomenon in Japan's sbare markets.

Japanese regulators, who have never prosecuted an insider trading case, found no evidence of wrongdoing. But the Finance Ministry immediately began formulating legislative proposals, which were submitted to the Diet in February.

Unlike the U.S. approach. Japan's Securiues Bureau, an agency of the Finance Ministry, relies on close relationships with brokerage houses as its principal source of information on market activities.

The proposed legislation will not represent в revolution, government and market sources caution. In essence, it will allow regulators to continue using these relationships while giving them more power to pur-sue offenders. Most important, the legislation will define for the first time what constitutes insider trading and set out categories covering various types of offenders.

"We're not trying to copy Western regulatory systems," said Eisuke Nagamoto, maninsider traders but to prevent the practice by encouraging self-regulation.

To critics of the system, none of this is likely to help. Close definitions of insider trading, which the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has avoided, can be circunvented as soon as they are formulated, these observers say.

And it is precisely the brokers, they add. who often seem to be at the center of activities soon to be defined as illegal.

There is also the problem of "political stocks," issues apparently pushed by politi-cal machines to build up campaign funds.

Still, suggestions of change are emerging, Previous market patterns, such as the escalation of a sbare price just before a new corporate financing, are now less certain to occur, some foreign brokers say.

Nomura and other leading brokerage firms are busily crecting their own "Chinese walls" to separate sales departments from other divisions. They are also increasing their supervisory staffs and formulating voluntary guidelines on insider trading practices.

Whether all this is much more then window-dressing, most observers believe, will depend chiefly on bow determined regulators are to enforce the new rules.

AMBASSADOR IN PARIS: The Reagan Years

By Evan G. Galbraith. 160 pages. $16.95. Regnery Gateway, 950 North Shore Drive, Lake Bluff, ILL 60044. Reviewed by Scott Sullivan

WHEN President Reagan named Evan G. Gaibraith as ambassador to France in 1981, it looked like a dream appointment. Handsome, youthful and very engaging, Gal-braith was an ardent Francophile. He had spent six years in Paris as a lawyer and banker. He spoke passable French. He was also a close friend of William F. Buckley Jr. the conserva-tion ideologiet and his admiration for Reagan tive ideologist, and his admiration for Reagan knew no limits. Even leftist Frenchmen applauded the nomination on the grounds that Galbraith would give them a direct, unvar-nished version of the American administration's thinking. He did just that. Indeed, Galbraith approached his ambassadorship as a missionary rather than a diplomat. He set himself the task rather than a diplomat. He set musch us task of "telling it like it is" to the French govern-ment and people. He practiced "poblic diplo-macy" in dozens of brash, often controversial interviews and television talk shows. He tirelessly preached the gospel of supply-side eco-nomics to anyone who would listen.

nomics to anyone who would listen. But there were a lot of rough spots. Gal-brith often confused high French officials by giving them his own views "as a concerned cinzen," rather than simply communicating Washingtoo's carefully weighed positions. He cold-shouldered the Communist ministers in François Mitterrand's first government. His oot-quite-perfect French led him to public eaffers. He infuriated his cominal superiors in gaffes. He infuriated his oominal superiors in the State Department. Most seriously, he undermined the morale of many of the men and women who served him in the embassy. Privately, he referred to them as "cookie pushers." In one interview he declared that "foreign policy is too important to be left up to Foreign Service officers."

Now, Galbraith has written a short, utterly, unrepentent book describing and defending his record in Paris. In it, he boasts of success-fully explaining the U.S. invasion of Grenada. He regrets that be failed to torpedo the construction of the Soviet gas pipeline project. He even claims credit for nudging the Mitterrand regime away from doctrinaire socialism toward regime away from doctinaire socialism toward pragmatic centrism — a shift that most histori-ans will chalk up to the macro-economics of the 1980s, rather than to the U.S. ambassador. Like the author himself, Galbraith's book is -breathlessly energetic, full of charm and abso-hutely single-minded. He is aware that many. French officials, not to mention many people in the State Department, regarded him as a dreadful ambassador. He meets every charge leveled against him with the same reckless gusto he displayed when he was in his post. Hay defends his frequent interventions in internal. French affairs with the simple argument that France would be better off if it would just adopt Reagan's policies lock, stock and harrel. adopt Reagan's policies lock, stock and harnel. (In fact, he is still telling the French what to do, Last week, he wrote a column for the conserva-tive daily Le Figaro endorsing Jacques Chirac's, candidacy for the French presidency.)

Galbraith is at his most winning when he describes the social side of his stay in Paris. He and his pretty wife, Bootsie, were the most active and outgoing embassy couple since the Sargent Shrivers in the late 1960s. And they loved their holmobbing at embassy dimers with the likes of Frank Sinatra or skiing with the Buckleys in Gstaad. On the substantive side, however, Galbraith does less well. His spirited defense of his mission to Paris is fikely. to confirm the view of those who think that an American president should choose his principal ambassadors from the ranks of the career Foreign Service.

BOSTON - In the closest finish in the Boston Marathon's 92-race history, Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya overtook Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania with 100 pards (91.4 meters) left and sprinted to a one-second victory Monday on a rain-soaked course. Husein's time of 2 hours, 8 minutes, 43 seconds was the second fastest in the event's history and made him the first. African to win here. Hussein won the New York City Marathon last November and the Honoluin Marathon six weeks later.

"I like to make history," Hussein said. "I was also the first African to win New York City." Ikangaa finished in 2:08:44 and John Treacy of Ireland, who had announced only on Saturday that he would compete, was third in 2:09:15.

Baseball

Hussein and Ikangaa were shoulder to shoulder at 35 kilometers, or 21.75 miles, in 1:46:22. The Boston record for that distance is 1:45:51, set by Roh de Castella in 1986, when he established a course record with a winning time of 2:07:51.

Hussein, Ikangaa and Treacy shared the lead after 18 miles, their time of 1:27:31 being nearly three minutes faster than that of Steve Jones last year, who led at that point with a 1:31:28 clocking.

Tanzania's Zakariah Barie, seeking his first mara-thon victory, led halfway through the race with a time that put him on pace to break the day-old world marathon record. He covered it in 1.03:12, and held a slight edge over a pack of about a dozen runners. Belayneh Dinsamo of Ethiopia had set the world record of 2:06:50 at Sunday's Rotterdam Marathon. But Barie had plenty of competition in the race whose lead continually changed hands and whose lead

Year Fork Times Service NEW YORK - About 10 years ago, a cabinet minister in South Africa said, "If we go, we will pull the temple down."

Such a marbling attitude scents to exemplify the intransigence of the white ruling class in South Africa, a distinct and hugely powerful body that has withstood for many years, from much of the rest of the world. boycotts and threats from areas as diverse as the military, the commercial and sports. None of the efforts hy any outside groups or countries has had much effect on the hrutalizing, dehumanizing system of apartheid that is the law of the land in South Africa.

Surely, continuing boycouts and more positive actions against the government are needed. It is better to do something than to do nothing, and hope that those massings of somethings will even-tually have an impact.

One wonders, though, about the threat by the International Amateur Athletic Federation's council to bar Britain from all international track events, including the Olympics, unless it suspends runner Zola Budd. The council stated that Budd should be banned from running for at least a year because of her ties to her native South Africa.

If she were banned for that length of time, then, of course, she would not be allowed to compete in the the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul. If she were not banned for that length of time, and did compete, then black African nations have warned that they would boycott the Olympics, sending them into disarray — no new thing for the Games, which have been buffeted with political disturbances and walkouts and boycotts from Mexico City (1968) to Munich (1972) to Montreal (1976) to Moscow (1980) and Los Angeles (1984). What did Budd, who had given up her South African citizenship and become a British subject in 1984 in order, it may be assumed, to continue to compete on an in-ternacional level; what did she do to merit possible suspension?

From the charges, it wasn't that she competed in a track meet last June in Brakpan, South Africa, She didn't. And it wasn't just that she was a spectator there. It was that she also appeared in her expediency." The LAAF determined that Budd, although not breaking the letter of the law (she didn't compete), broke the spirit of the law. The "spirit" can be difficult to nail. The LAAF did not stipulate that Budd could not return to South Africa, it did not stipulate that she could not use the facilities. Should she have considered that she be like Caesar's wife? Probably. But she didn't. Was it arrogance? Was it Ignorance?

ried the dignified title of Lord Grade of Elstree. But in his heart of hearts, he is still Lew Grade, the show husiness wheeler-dealer with the $10 cigar. In the 1950s and '60s, he dominated commercial television production in Britain. In the 70s, he was an international movie mogul with a passion for scaling multimillion-dollar deals with a handshake and a cry of "That's relationship!"

Nowadays, the old deal-mak-ing obsession is still there, but at the age of $1, Lord Grade has adopted a quieter style. Actually, he likes to sneak up on people. "If I do a deal, I can do it calmly, gently," he said during an interview in his office. "I have everyone's home phone number. I call them at the weekend when they're calm and peaceful." That was the way he landed Diana Rigg for a part she swore she would never play, the villainess in his television movie "A Hazard of Hearts." A Regency romance based on a

Barbara Cartland novel, "A Haz-ard of Hearts," has already been aired in the United States and is set for release on the BBC next year. In June, Lord Grade plans to start production on "Dangerous Love," another Cartland project. Since he owns the rights to 450 romances hy the world's bestselling novelist, Lord Grade fig-

"They looked out for me. They said, ten an autohiography, "Still 'Lew, there's a great act in Budapest.' It was relationship. They It is selling hriskly in Britain, and its publication makes a fair never let me down."

When Lord Grade went into the movie business, "relationship" meant the ability to raise multimillion hudgets with a few handshakes. His other key concepts were "all-star cast" and "instinct.

Sometimes, the results were successful. His company helped finance "On Golden Pond" and 'Sophie's Choice."

At other times, the results have been less than great. Both "Raise the Titanic" and "Voyage of the Damned" were hig movies that had famous actors and little else. 'My higgest failing is that when I read a book or a script I'm seeing it happen. I'm seeing Robert Redford, Mel Gibson or Meryl Streep," Lord Grade confessed, But, he added, the projects often follow through on his original vi-sion. "I had to leave it to other people. They did their best. But it just didn't work. Now if I'm only doing three or four projects a year, it's a piece of cake." These days, he waits for inspiration to come in a second floor office in Mayfair, where he ar-rives at 7 A.M. each day by chauffeur-driven Rolls.

At some point in the day, Lord Grade usually chats by telephone with his 44-year-old nephew, Michael, who is carrying on the family tradition as managing director of Channel Four, Britain's innovative commercial television net-

On the desk is a notepad bound in silver where he jots names that pop into his head. This is his secret list of actors he may call about "Dangerous Love." For the male lead, he would like a young American he is touting as "the next Errol Flynn." But the hero is not his real worry at the moment. "A very important part is always the had woman and the bad man," Lord Grade observed. Many in the movie industry regard Lord Grade's faith in higname casts and squeaky clean romantic films with no nudity or profanity as hopelessly dated. Indeed, as he compiles his list of first and second choices for each role. Lord Grade acknowledges that his system of casting is an anachronism in a time when "the
